

ROOSEVELTS CUT WEDDING LIST

Only Near Relatives of Two Families Will Be Present at the Ceremonies.

MRS. LODGE IS LEFT OUT

Wife of Administration Senator Said to Have Been Omitted from the List.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 10.—Cutting down the list of queries for Miss Alice Roosevelt's wedding continues to excite comment here, where it is said several hundred persons who had counted upon an invitation as a certainty are doomed to disappointment.

It is said on good authority that intimate friends of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt have been omitted from the revised list and, indeed, only a few of Miss Roosevelt's and of Mr. Longworth's close friends are included in the list. Outside of the immediate members of the family only first cousins and first cousins' children are included, thereby causing consternation among the multitude of Roosevelts who are not within this narrow limit.

Boston has received in proportion to its population many more invitations than any other city. This, it is explained, is because Miss Roosevelt's mother was a Boston woman. And yet it is whispered that, through some error, or for some unexplained reason, the wife of Senator Harry Cadot Lodge has not received the looked for card.

All the arrangements for the wedding have been made by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Miss Alice has had very little to say in the matter, and only allowed to invite the most intimate of her girl friends and the young matrons who had invited her to be their bridesmaids.

Among the guests will be: Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Tuckerman, the latter was Miss Lila McCauley; Miss Isabel May, Miss Elizabeth Warder, Miss Carolyn Postlethwaite, Miss Elinor Parker, daughter of Representative Wayne Parker, Miss Josephine and Mabel Boardman, the latter having accompanied the Taft expedition to establish the Red Cross in Manila; Mrs. Nicholas Anderson, who is a cousin of Mr. Longworth's; Mr. and Mrs. Philip McMillan, Miss Amy McMillan, who was also of the Taft party, and Representative Swager Sherley and his fiancée, Miss Mignon Crittchen.

A surprising number of people are going to Washington for the week of February 17th, not only those who are expected for the wedding, but strangers who can only take a national interest in the event.

The hotels are crowded, and even at this early date it is with great difficulty that rooms can be engaged. The magic name of Roosevelt, however, in connection with the expected guests in several instances secured a room; but a suite, unless bespoken some time since, is an impossibility. What the casual stranger can count on seeing is the question. Certainly not the wedding, as it is a private house affair. Perhaps the glory of being a guest at the wedding of the bride-elect is sufficient.

The fact remains that the hotels are reaping the benefit.

Plead for Water at Feast.

Much advice is received at the White House regarding the wedding of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth. Little, if any, of it reaches the President and Mrs. Roosevelt family, but Secretary Loeb finds the mail every morning filled with letters containing suggestions as to the wedding ceremonies and quite a number from the good people who are opposed to the use of wine at the wedding breakfast.

A gentleman up in Massachusetts named Philetus Ash, has published a letter which he says he has mailed to the President, but it has not yet reached the White House. Mr. Ash says that his aunt is going to Washington at the representative of the W. C. T. U. to interview the President in regard to serving wine at the White House breakfast on the wedding day. Mr. Ash says that the W. C. T. U. believes that "one glass of old Catawba partaken of by young Mr. Longworth might be the cornerstone as it were, of Alice's life of unhappiness."

Sends $100 for Aunt's Bail.

He then says he has written the following letter to the President:

My Dear Colonel—My aunt, Miss Bethusaler, formerly of the Western Reserve, Ohio, now of South Ashtabud, visits you on Tuesday, the 14th of February, in behalf of the South Ashtabud W. C. T. U. I do not think she will make any disturbance at the White House, but she is a newspaper woman and may be led to commit any sort of extravagance.

I enclose check for $100 for you to give her for her police court in case she makes any trouble and to pay any fine within that amount that may be imposed. If not used, please hold the check until after the wedding.

While this letter has not reached the White House, it is by no means many that have been written on the same subject. The affairs of the President's family seem to interest a large number of people, and they take advantage of the mails to express their opinions and offer their advice to Mr. Roosevelt and all the members of his family," she said. Most of the ushers who will officiate at the ceremony are millionaires, and include several relatives and Mr. Longworth's closest college chums at Harvard. They are—

List of Ushers.

Thomas Nelson Perkins, a lawyer, a member of the corporation of Harvard University, and a son of Edward C. Perkins, of Boston, formerly of Cincinnati. He was a classmate of Mr. Longworth's at Harvard.

Buckner Wallingford, from Haysville, Ky., but has lived in Cincinnati twenty years. He is of the Walter Wallingford Company, dealers in pig iron and furnace products. He married Miss Annie Reeves Longworth.

Quincy Adams Shaw, Jr., a Harvard man, is a member of one of the oldest and wealthiest families in Boston, and is a director of the Calumet & Hecla Copper Company. His wife was Miss Sarah Pemberton, of Philadelphia.

Lars Anderson is Mr. Longworth's cousin. He spent several years in the diplomatic service. His wife was Miss Isabel Perkins, of Boston, worth $17,000,000.

Guy Norman is well-known in social, banking and yachting circles in Boston. He was an ensign on the battleship in the Spanish war. His wife is a daughter of the late General Falfrey, of Salem.

Francis Reginald Bangs is a Boston alderman. He is a Harvard man, a lawyer, and married Miss Anna Anderson, of Boston.

Frederick Winthrop, of New York and Ipswich, Mass., will repay to Mr. Longworth the compliment of three years ago, when Mr. Longworth acted as usher at his wedding to Miss Dorothy Amory. He is of an old New York family, and a member of the principal clubs.

Viscount Charles de Chambrun is a member of an old French family and lives in Paris. He is in the French diplomatic service, and is a present secretary of the French Embassy here. He married the younger sister of Representative Longworth.

Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is the oldest son of the President.

GIFT OF FRANCE AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Each day adds to the collection of wedding presents for Miss Alice Roosevelt accumulating in the attic storeroom of the White House.

The gift of France has arrived and been presented by Ambassador Jusserand in whose care it was sent. It is a beautiful piece of Gobelin tapestry which was woven by M. Michael, chief weaver of the Gobelin factory, and is a replica of one of the four famous pieces of tapestry in the Mazarin Gallery in the National Gallery designed by Francois Ehrmann, of Alsace. The original is priceless and this copy is said to be worth $25,000.

It is understood it was first intended by the French government to give Miss Roosevelt a set of Sèvres china, but it was rumored that the German Emperor would give her a set of china, and the tapestry was then selected. The statement has been made that the gift was chosen woven and sent on its way to this country before the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were aware of it, and that otherwise they would have requested the government of France not to send it.

MISS ROOSEVELT TO HAVE A COIFFEUR

Miss Alice Roosevelt will have her hair dressed for her wedding, her bridal veil draped and the orange blossoms artistically caught upon it by the coiffeur who performed similar offices for her aunt, the wife of Captain William S. Cowles, U. S. N. Mrs. Cowles, who was then Miss Anna Roosevelt, was married in November, 1885, in London, where her husband, then a lieutenant commander, was naval attaché of the American Legation.

M. Auguste is the coiffeur's name, and he was then wealthy and patronized by the British nobility and fashion of London. He has had misfortunes, but since he came to New York a year ago, many American women, his patrons in England, have again taken him up.

When Miss Roosevelt was in New York on her shopping tour recently, M. Auguste was attending Mrs. Robert Gould Jr., at whose home Miss Roosevelt was a guest. The latter had seen the coiffeur before at her aunt's home, but had always refused the services of hairdressers.

"They all want to curl my hair and make me look like a poodle," she said. Auguste was permitted to show his art and he was so successful that Miss Roosevelt engaged him for her wedding.

He had purchased a ticket to a western city where he intends to establish himself, but her wish was a command, and he will go to Washington next Thursday, when the bridal veil will be tried on after Auguste has dressed the hair.

Miss Roosevelt's hair will be dressed low in the back with deep pompadour low on the forehead.

WILL CLOSE SCHOOLS.

General Vaccination in Chesterfield Against Smallpox.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

CHESTER, VA., February 10.—There are reports of two new cases of smallpox near Port Walthall, resulting from the case first reported, but it is not as yet definitely confirmed, and another member of the family of negroes affected here is reported sick this afternoon, and the health officer will be here tomorrow to see if it is a case of smallpox.

The public schools will be closed until the children can be vaccinated, and Dr. Loving advises that as soon as vaccinated they can return to school unless the disease becomes more general. At present it is confined to houses quarantined, and it is not expected that it will go outside of the affected homes; yet as it was several days before it was discovered, and as the diseased parties were circulating among the people, it is feared that under the impression they had only some skin eruption, no one can tell where the next case may appear, and the health officer urges a general vaccination of the people.

The people here are being vaccinated, and an effort is being made to have all the people in the vicinity of Port Walthall vaccinated.

One of Dr. Irving's children there is sick, but a physician from Petersburg states it is the effect of the vaccination and not smallpox.

Dr. Leigh has been notified, and if Boone returns here he will be confined to his home to await developments.

THE STAMP OF TRUTH

Richmond Residents Know It Well.

There is the stamp of truth on a statement endorsed by people we know, by friends and neighbors. The following experience of a Richmond citizen is but one case of scores right here at home.

J. W. Blanton, wholesale grocer, of 1304 East Cary Street, says: "When a man has persistently and consistently tried standard remedies all guaranteed to stop aching across the small of his back, when he has exhausted all his knowledge of medicine acquired by reading and tried every make-shift which his friends and acquaintances advised, and still that aching clings to him, he very naturally recommends the means he at last used which brought relief, particularly so if the attacks of an aching back have stretched over a period of years. When I say that I am pleased with the results I obtained from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Owens & Minor's drug store, I very truly express the facts. I have on several occasions advised the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

CONSOLIDATION OF FISH FACTORIES

Litigation in Regard to the Illegal Taking of Oysters.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

HEATHSVILLE, VA., February 10.—The managers of the "Woodlark" and "Tankard" and the "Eubank and Gill" fish factories, recently held a meeting at this place and decided to consolidate, the firm to be called the "Eubank Tankard and Company. Captain James Marsh was made manager.

Justice E. W. Eichelberger held a lively session of his court at this place a few days ago. Mr. Lloyd Harrison was arraigned before him on the charge of trespassing on the oyster ground of Captain A. J. Lewis, in Coan River. Justice Eichelberger imposed a fine of $25, but later a compromise was made and the fine reduced to $5 and costs, the defendant agreeing to pay $12 for the oysters taken. Attorney Asa S. Rice appeared in behalf of the defense.

A few days later several Coan River oystermen met Commonwealth's Attorney C. S. Towles at Shirley's Hotel. It is understood that the object of the meeting was to consider the instituting of a suit in the Northumberland court against Captain A. J. Lewis of Telford, for illegal staking in of oyster bottom in Coan River. No definite action has yet been taken.

The Lend-a-Hand Society will hold a seventh anniversary banquet in the town hall the 15th.

The drama, "Under the Laurels," for the benefit of the M. E. Church, South, will be rendered here the 12th, and at Reedville, the 14th.

Mr. W. McD. Lee attended the inauguration of Governor Claude A. Swanson.

A social was given Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Grace E. Booker, of Lottsburg, for the benefit of the St. Stephen's Guild.

NO SUMMER SCHOOL.

Favorable Reports From Jamaica of Dr. McBryde's Health.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

BLACKSBURG, VA., February 10.—The Summer School of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, which was organized during the summer of 1904, has been discontinued by the faculty. At a meeting held Thursday afternoon a resolution was passed, which practically means that all summer work will be abolished. It is thought, however, that a demand will be made for the work some time in the future, and a hope is entertained by several of those who have been offering summer courses that the summer work will be resumed.

Report from Jamaica concerning the health of Dr. J. M. McBryde, the president of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, are very favorable. Dr. McBryde had broken down under the strain of his work, and was forced to give up his active duties for a while. During his absence the executive work has fallen upon the shoulders of Deans Smythe and Campbell. It is thought, however, that President McBryde will soon be able to resume his post. He has become such an integral part of the Institute itself that his absence from the college is very sorely felt by all those who have any connection with it, and on every hand the hearty inquiries concerning him, and expressions of regret about his being away. The deans who are in charge have been wonderfully successful with the work entrusted to their care and have won the approbation of all who come in contact with them.

Colonel R. A. Marr, who succeeded the late Colonel W. M. Patton as the head of the school of civil engineering and dean of the department of engineering, and who took up his work at the beginning of the present session, has won for himself a host of friends in the Institute. Colonel Marr is quite a jovial and congenial man, and has wonderful ability in reaching the hearts of his students, all of whom esteem him very highly. Colonel Patton's successor has had a very difficult position to fill, and the Institute was quite fortunate in securing Colonel Marr to fill it.

his work for the first time this session in the department of geology, is a very interesting character. Professor Holden is a man of wonderful breadth and commands a knowledge of general subjects that is astonishing. Besides his duties as an assistant professor of geology in the Institute, he is also a fellow in the Carnegie Institution, and is now working up a history of the iron and steel industry of Virginia for the Carnegie Institution.

He was without shoes and his feet were frozen.

He was carried to the home of Mr. John Wood near Nuthurst, where Doctor F. J. Gregory found that both feet would have to be amputated, and it is reported that Doctor Gregory performed the operation to-day.

Hardy's horse stood by him all night, and after he had left parties returned to look for his shoes which could not be found, and the horse was still near the place where he was left. Hardy was not seriously injured any way except his feet. His hands and face were fully exposed, but with little attention they will soon be all right.

Young Hardy Suffers Terribly From Exposure.

MEHERRIN, VA., February 10.—Mr. J. Y. Hardy, the young man who, while en route to his home from this place, last Saturday night fell from his horse when about five miles from this point, as told in the Times-Dispatch at the time, is in a critical condition. He layed out all night, and when found the next morning close a deal for 5,000 acres of land adjacent to Claremont, to a colony of Adventists, also that they are to purchase the Rich and Hillard Box Shook factory and run it to its full capacity, which will employ from 50 to 60 hands.

There is strong talk of a cement works, of a large firm to engage in the manufacture of concrete stone building blocks, also a peanut factory with facilities for the manufacture of peanut butter. These are all businesses for which the location of Claremont is peculiarly adapted, but are in a great measure hindered from being at once put in operation by not having a standard gauge railroad here to ship the goods on and so saving the transfer charges and rough handling which many goods cannot stand.
